ASK JEANNE

"Im 24 weeks pregnant and petite (five feet tall) and I have to go to a cocktail party with my husband. I want a trendy cocktail dress. What styles would you suggest?"—Victoria

DEAR VICTORIA:

Maternity wear doesn't look anything like the maternity wear being made years ago. There are so many flattering styles, it's not necessary for you to go to a maternity shop.

Don't wear a muumuu or mini tent just because your belly is bigger. The most comfortable, easyto-wear fabrics to buy are the matte jerseys-stay away from the clingy, ultra-light variety. Look to some of Canada's designers for great dresses: I saw Ben Mulroney's pregnant wife, Jessica, at a gala wearing a vibrant, simple jersey Greta Constantine dress, and she looked gorgeous. Lida Baday is also known for her stellar jersey dresses. For silhouettes, follow these rules: Look for an A-line cut that will drape, or something stretchy with ruching in a punchy colour. Black never goes out of fashionand is always slimming.

When I was six months pregnant with my daughter Joey in 1989, I was at the Chanel couture atelier to shoot an interview with Karl Lagerfeld. I was wearing a drab, olive-green, silk outfit from a maternity shop and felt terribly un-chic. Luckily, Lagerfeld's studio head offered to loan me a Chanel outfit for the shoot. I pointed to my pregnant belly and told him it was impossible. He took me into a back room stuffed with old samples. Miraculously, the first dress fit: It was A-line, cap-sleeved, black, with a white satin V-shaped front panel. Karl was so impressed with the way it looked, he gave it to me. I was ecstatic to own my very first Chanel dress, and wore it for another two months during my pregnancy. After I had my daughter, however, I was reluctant to wear it again. Don't make a huge investment, since you may only want to wear your dress for a few months.

Whatever dress you choose, the simpler, the better. Wear a minimalist look and dress things up with the accessories. Try a halter neckline: It's a dramatic yet feminine cut that draws attention to your shoulders. Go for knee-length; anything longer will make you look shorter. Try a platform shoe with a thicker heel or wedge, but nothing that will make you wobbly. Avoid ankle straps, they make your legs look shorter.

As for colour, try something bright: Coral, turquoise, royal blue or red Or Pantone's hue of 2013, emerald green. Sunny vellow is always nice: teamed with gold accessories, you'll be simply glowing.

J. CREW MAKES BAGS WITH MONTREAL BRAND

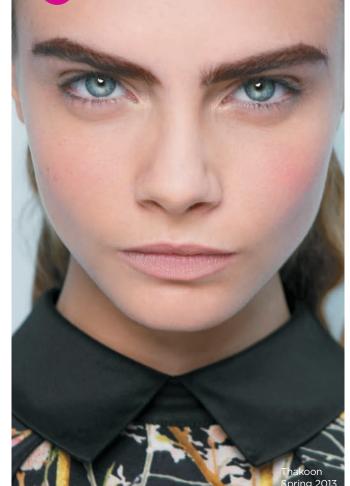

J. Crew debuted a collection of bags by Montreal-based company Want Les Essentiels de la Vie. The fashionablefunctional collection made a surprise debut at fashion week in New York (Feb. 7 to Feb. 14). Want Les Essentiels is known for its top quality, and J.Crew collaborated with the brand three years ago on a menswear bag collection that flew off the shelves. The new womenswear creations are stylish leather and organic cotton totes that fold into streamlined clutches, perfect for long days—and nights. The bags are set for select J. Crew stores across Canada in late 2013. -Lauren Harasty

PLUMPED & GLOWING COMPLEXION

OLGA LORENCIN-NORTHRUP Founder and esthetician at, Kinara Spa, Los Angeles, kinaraspa.com

CLIENTS: Halle Berry, Kerry Washington and January Jones

RED-CARPET PREP: "The Red Carpet Facial, which I tailor-made for red-carpet appearances is a hit. It has lactic acid and amino acids to exfoliate and purify the skin, while the final step, an anti-inflammatory facial mask, delivers maximum glow.'

BREAKOUT SOS: "If a client has a blemish, we send them to a dermatologist to inject cortisone, or ice it. If it's a broken blood vessel, there is nothing we can do. That's when their makeup artist steps in to cover it up. There are no quick fixes in skincare."

INTENSIVE TREATMENTS

MILA MOURSI Founder, Mila Moursi Skin Care Institute and Day Spa, Beverly Hills, Calif., milamoursiskincare.com

CLIENTS: Jennifer Aniston, Courteney Cox and Jessica Biel

RED-CARPET PREP: "We do a skincare boot camp featuring The Classic treatment once a week, for a month. This two-hour treatment is the ultimate restoration program to detoxify, sculpt and condition the face and body."

TIRED-EYE FIX: "Try a warm milk compress on closed eyes for a couple of minutes in the morning. Then, pat a few drops of argan oil or wheat germ oil around the eye. This hydrates and makes eyes look smoother. For dark circles, apply lemon slices and for puffiness, apply cucumber slices.'

HI-TECH

JOANNA VARGAS Celebrity facialist and founder of, Joanna Vargas Salon and Skincare Collection, New York, joannavargas.com

SKINCARE CREDO: Microcurrent facials and LED light beds to build collagen and elastin CLIENTS: Rachel Weisz, Karlie Kloss

RED-CARPET PREP: "It's all about my Power Peel. I exfoliate with a diamond peel, detox with an organic blueberry peel, and use LED Light Therapy to correct surface damage, build collagen and reduce inflammation.

> PORE SOS: "I always do my Power Peel to minimize pores. The blueberry detox peel has paprika to help flush out all the impurities from the skin."

SECRET WEAPON: "Eating for great skin is a must. A green juice a day keeps you hydrated and oxygenated.'

HOLISTIC

TERRI LAWTON Celebrity esthetician.

Los Angeles, terrilawton.com

CLIENTS: Michelle Williams and Kate Bosworth

RED-CARPET PREP: "We are doing a lot of Intraceuticals Oxygen facials. It gives an amazing glow to the skin and can hydrate, soothe and boost the skin."

SECRET WEAPON: "I use organic exfoliants, one being blueberry extract, which helps detox the skin. This helps release not only physical toxins but stress as well, and opens up skin to receive the great ingredients we use."

Gisele

Bündchen

Karlie Kloss

90-MIN

CHRISTINE CHIN Esthetician at, Christine Chin Spa, New York, christinechin.com

CLIENTS: Salma Hayek and Gisele Bündchen

RED CARPET PREP: "Generally, if a client has clogged pores, I recommend getting a facial a week ahead to give the skin enough time to heal. But if you only have 30 minutes, the best thing to do is cleanse, do a hydration or a clay mask (depending on your skin type), tone the skin, add a serum such as AHA or Retin-A, and moisturize."

> ECRET WEAPON: "The Cell Gold Gommage Peeling, combining lactic and glycolic acid, is the one product I recommend to get red-carpet ready."

Hollywood's biggest award show takes place Sunday, February 24, and we have high style expectations for Jennifer Lawrence, Anne Hathaway, Kerry Washington and Julianne Moore based on their red-carpet entrances at other award shows—especially The Golden Globes. Who will win our vote for best-dressed? Airs at 7 p.m. EST. Follow us as we live tweet the red carpet @TheKit and read our online wrap-up the next day on TheKit.ca.

We first met Club Monaco's beautiful senior vicepresident Caroline Belhumeur when we shot the brand's spring lookbook at her quaint and quirky home in the New York suburb of Mount Kisco. It is the perfect escape from busy and bustling Manhattan. Her home is like something out of a fairy tale, with a white wrought-iron gate, colour-coordinated bookshelves, Le Labo candles, delicate bud vases and an intricate candelabra (which we outfitted with cocktail rings, in typical Coveteur fashion). It's clear her job is the perfect fit for Belhumeur; her closet seamlessly captures the Club Monaco girl, mixing classic silhouettes with contemporary touches. She dished on her most-treasured high-end pieces—her first-ever Gaultier jacket and the cadre of Margiela boots she has collected by buying a new pair each season.

FRENCH HANDS

Unlike many fleeting fashion fixations that only insiders wear or even take notice of-here's looking at you, 1980sshoulder pads and fur shoes—nail art has made its way from the runways to nail salons, drugstore beauty counters and Pinterest pages across the land. You need to be paying attention to keep up with reverse French, empty moon and stiletto manicures.

So it was with much amusement that I watched my Twitter feed explode when classic French manicures were spotted on the Spring 2013 runway for Chanel. My beauty editor pals were sputtering with shock and irritation. Was it ironic? Was it for real? The French had actually popped up the previous season at Alexander McQueen (both McQueen and Chanel shows were under direction of beauty guru Peter Philips). So, perhaps reports of the French manicure's demise were greatly exaggerated? Is it time to give the French another try?

Lesa Hannah, beauty director at Fashion magazine, replies with an emphatic no. "A French is wrong because, well, where to begin? It's just so awful looking for starters, because it's thick, long and square and the light pink and stark white tip only serve to emphasize those aspects.

The Kit's contributing editor, Chantel Guertin, doesn't buy the French manicure's bad press. "Bring it back! I want it to come back. It's a clean look.'

I headed to Ritual Salon in Toronto to give the French an honest try. Owner Maria Cristina insists that it's never really gone away. "The average woman—stylish women—they still ask for it. It looks clean and pretty." Nail technician Heather had the steady hands of a surgeon as she painted the thin white strip on my short nail tips and then covered everything with a pale creamy top coat (Ritual's method for making the manicure's contrast less stark). After many seasons of dark nails in style there's something very fresh about having light, bright nails.

And very noticeable.

The French manicure aims to mimic the natural colour pattern of your nails but in fact it amplifies it. I wasn't quite through the door at my office when a workmate quipped, "Got your nails done?" I was taking off my coat at the end of the day when my babysitter noted, "Oh, you got a manicure!" Even my husband, who thankfully does not keep track of the comings and goings of nail trends, said, "They don't look like your hands." And as much as I liked the clean look of my French manicure, I couldn't stop noticing it in a way that wasn't altogether comfortable. My nails look very nice and should be on someone else's hands. Will the come-back manicure look better in the spring sunshine that in the thin light of winter? Perhaps. For now, I've got an appointment with my bottle of acetone.

Au revoir, Frenchie.
