ASK JEANNE

"Sneakers have been trendy for several seasons and now I'm seeing them with unlikely outfits. Neon sneakers with a dress? Can it work in real life?"—Lola

DEAR LOLA:

For anybody who's ever looked to put a spring in their step, sneakers are definitely the way to go. They can instantly make you feel young and hip. Whether they're high-tops, converse-style, studded, sequined or wedge-heeled, new sneakers will add an air of casual cool to any outfit. Just remember: tread carefully when it comes to wearing sneakers with dresses.

While they may be hotter than ever this season, runners have been around for a long, long time. The Bata Shoe Museum's newest exhibition, "Out of the Box: The Rise of Sneaker Culture," examines the fashion phenomenon, from the late 1800s to the latest couture offerings. "Today, well-dressed men pair sneakers with everything from jeans to suits, and, increasingly, sneakers are being advocated as options for fashionable women," says senior curator Elizabeth Semmelhack. "Wearing sneakers with dresses creates a look that is fresh and youthful with a slight 1980s retro vibe. Yet, unlike the '80s iteration, which was rebellious yet childish, today's look is more sophisticated."

I've got to hand it to my youngest daughter, Joey. For her high school prom a few years back she wore a gorgeous Joieffer Caoc gown, complete with tiny fabric angel wings glued to her back. On her feet—you guessed it—the style rebel wore black and white Converse sneakers.

I cringed when I saw her, of course. But by the end of the night, her feet were pain-free, resulting in a perfectly comfortable time. The spirited look seemed pretty off to me, but in retrospect, she was celebrating the last vestiges of youth—and her sneakers certainly spoke to that.

Choosing the right style and colour is important. If you don't have long legs, stick with soft, neutral shades that help elongate them. And everyone should avoid wearing actual workout shoes with a dress, otherwise you'll give off the "just on my way to—or from—the gym" vibe.

Need more incentive? Old classic looks like Converse sneakers were seen everywhere at last month's Coachella music festival. Dree Hemingway was snapped on the red carpet in a Marc Jacobs shirt-dress paired with simple white tennis sneakers and Diane Kruger made waves at the French Open last year in a pair of pink high-tops teamed with a Marios Schwab minidress. The adorable outfit certainly didn't harm her status on any best-dressed list. There's a time and place for everything in fashion, and that even includes sneakers.

RIGHT ROYAL STYLE

Issa London, a brand whose dresses have been favoured by Kate Middleton, has announced a limited-edition Banana Republic collaboration. The line is inspired by the retailer's safari-look roots and will pay tribute in offerings that feature zebra- and leopard-print designs, with neutrals and jewel tones. The 40-piece collection runs from $70 to $150 for apparel and $40 to $150 for jewellery and accessories. Look for it on August 6 online and at select Banana Republic locations. —Kiley Bell

H&M FOR TEAM SWEDEN

It's a busy year for H&M: launching Europe's new luxury arm &Other Stories, scoring Beyoncé as the new face (and body) of the 2013 ad campaign, and now it has signed a contract to dress the Swedish Olympic and Paralympic teams in Russia 2014 and Brazil 2016. The athletes will return the favour by helping to create H&M's Sport label, which will be available worldwide in January 2014. —C.G.

STYLE PHILOSOPHY

HOW TO WEAR PATTERN AND COLOUR AT ANY AGE.

BY CARRIE KIRKMAN

Fashion is something I live and breathe. Not just as a spectator, but as an active participant. As President of Jones Group Canada, it's my job to shepherd our brands (including Jones New York, Anne Klein and RACHEL Rachel Roy) through the fast and furious world of fashion. This means knowing what's going on both locally and globally throughout the seasons. But, it also means understanding women.

The very concept of a trend has changed in the last decade. It seems there used to be one fixed set of rules to follow, but now women have a wealth of choice. And while it can sometimes be difficult to navigate trends with confidence, it's time for you to step out of your comfort zone and embrace at least one fashion piece in a vibrant colour or pattern.

COLOUR-BLOCKING OFFERS BIG IMPACT

The coral and pink pairing in this chic and spirited RACHEL Rachel Roy ensemble is ideal for the adventurous. Alternatively, try incorporating a print into your look, whether it's a bold graphic or a large-scale floral. Print and pattern in denim are also big for the season, offering a new and playful take on your favourite casual staple. If you've been waiting for fashion to catch up to your style, there are so many fabulous, bold and colourful prints that you can just step right into.

RACHEL Rachel Roy Layer Dress, $109, and Blazer, $179.

HOT, WITH JUST A HINT OF PRINT

If you're inexperienced with wearing patterns, look for subtle small-scale prints or even textural patterns. For a more tempered take on the trend, I suggest one fabulous piece of colour, like a beautiful, bright jacket or cardigan. Take a cue from Anne Klein and pair a complementary colour that pulls from the print itself. A neutral-coloured trouser or skirt diffuses the "heat" of this lively combination and helps the entire look strike a perfect balance between on-trend and classic.

Anne Klein Three-quarter Sleeve V-Neck Cardigan, $99, and Reef Print Blouse, $89.

THE CALMING EFFECT OF WHITE

This gorgeous Jones New York outfit incorporates both colour and pattern, but also features plenty of white, which neutralizes the look and gives it a sense of timeless elegance. (Oh so very Michelle Obama, don't you think?) The ladylike silhouette and flattering hemline also make this look fabulous at any age.

Jones New York Collection Sleeveless Blouse, $79, and Pleated Skirt, $89.

If you adopt trends in ways that complement your existing wardrobe, you'll evolve through the seasons and add pieces with longevity. Stores such as Hudson's Bay are a playground for selection and style experimentation for women of every age. The key is to try something new and have fun along the way.

SPECS APPEAL

No longer just for librarians, eye glasses are everywhere and they're bang on-trend

BY GLYNNIS MAPP

Only 3.2 per cent of Canadians aged 15 and older reported having some type of visual impairment in 2006. What used to be a necessity for the near- and far-sighted is now a fashion statement for those with 20/20 vision, as quick and impactful as a swipe of red lipstick.

No one does adorkable like the Golden Globe-nominated star of New Girl, actress Zoe Deschanel; Tina Fey is our comedy (and feminist) idol, and Alicia Keys wore Clearly Contacts frames in her "Brand new me" video. (We had to have them and bonus: it's a Canadian brand). Jeanne Beker, fashion broadcaster and a contributing editor to The Kitz has her own eyewear line with the brand Fysh.

And original frames are being revived, too. Claire Goldsmith has relaunched her great-grandfather's eyewear brand, Oliver Goldsmith, making his sunglasses from the 1950s through to the 1980s available to the masses. She also created her own Claire Goldsmith line of super-chic frames in 2009.

Some of our favourite fashion muses are on board, too: J. Crew's creative director and style guru Jenna Lyons frequently wears hers and even had models sporting chunky frames in her Spring 2013 collection. J. Crew also recently invested in eyewear e-shop Warby Parker, a sign that if you ever had doubts about embracing frames, it's time to ditch them.

BROWN & BRONZED

How to warm up dark skin

BY NADINE ANGLIN

The season's ultimate multi-tasker, bronzers contour, highlight and warm up your skin, whether the weather's ready to or not.

"If you're looking for a bronzer to contour with, look for one that is matte and matches your skin's undertone," says Destiny Godley, YouTUBE beauty guru.

Can't find a bronzer that's dark enough for contouring? No problem "Boost your bronzer with a darker foundation or a brown eye shadow," she says. "If you have a very deep, dark skin tone, you can even use a tiny bit of black, blue or purple eye shadow."

Then, to highlight, look for a golden bronzer and apply to the peaks of your face where the sun would naturally hit. "I like to use this in the centre of the face to give it dimension, warmth, and a beautiful glow," says Godley.

TESTING, TESTING

BY CERI MARSH

SPRING SKIN PREP

Complaining about the torturously slow transition to spring we're enduring in Ontario is reaching Olympic levels. It's stunning, really, how many ways my Twitter stream can kvetch about the unseasonably cold temperatures. Isn't it clear that this sunny-but-cold, don't-even-think-about-open-toe-shoes weather is mother nature's way of giving you a beauty grace period?

In spring a young woman's fancy turns to thoughts of exfoliation. Months of cold, dry winds and overheated interiors means you're about to reveal some seriously dry skin. Are you ready? I thought not. Obviously there's an industrial-strength pedicure in my imminent future but I decided to start my own beauty spring cleaning at the top—with my face, that is. Does skin care need to be as seasonal as our clothes? I headed to Toronto's Glow Medi Spa (129 Yorkville Ave., Toronto) to find out.

Beauty insiders are addicted to the range of treatments available at Glow's tranquil, Yorkville spot—from big-gun Fraxel lasers to more traditional facials, plus several hard-to-find home skin-care ranges. Facialist Gabriela Madrid starts my treatment by taking a close look at my face.

"Winter can leave your skin looking dull and dry, which can contribute to the wrinkling of your skin," says Madrid. After cleansing, she applies a mask that immediately heats up and begins to tingle. The pattern the mask leaves on my skin after its wiped off shows Madrid where I need attention.

Madrid beams the world's brightest spot light on my face and hands me a mirror. Lordy. My skin is mostly pink—that's a good thing—but around my eyes, lips and neck there are patches of white. "That's where you don't have enough circulation," says Madrid. I believe this to be a nice, facialist's way of saying it's where my skin is showing signs of aging.

After a light enzyme mask to exfoliate a winter's worth of dry and dead skin, Madrid asks me if I'm claustrophobic. Not too much, I say, why? The facial she thinks my skin needs is made of collagen-infused paper, which she applies, wets and builds up, creating a hard mask.

I'm hoping the results are worth the subtle, buried-alive feeling building in my chest.

Just then, Madrid peels it all off, revealing the dewiest skin I've had in years. It feels comfortable and is not at all red, as many facials have left me.

As I leave, Madrid hands me a small container of Dr. Babor collagen cream to make the effects of my facial last longer.

Madrid recommends modifying your at-home routine at this time of year by "switching your rich, winter cream for a light oil-free moisturizer, adding a serum like vitamin C or collagen to give your skin a boost, an exfoliating cleanser, scrub or enzyme and, last but not least, a broad-spectrum SPF."

The next day my skin looks even better than when I walked out of Glow.

It takes me awhile to put my finger on what's different. It's not that my fine lines have been erased, but something else is there too. I look rested. And isn't that the best way to face spring?

CLOSET OF THE WEEK

Jane Larkworthy

Beauty Director, W Magazine; New York BY THE COVETEUR

As W's beauty director, Jane Larkworthy oversees all the magazine's beauty content, so we were shocked when she revealed she sticks to tried-and-true products. "How can you pick when new cool stuff comes along every day?" she asks. She was sporting a next-level manicure, though. "This look is DIY," she says. (OPI When Monkeys Fly over Nars Storm Bird, in case you were wondering.) Then we swooned over her colour-coordinated bookshelf and closet filled with one-of-a-kind designer vintage. "I only wear the occasional piece," she says. Well, she certainly knows how to pick them.

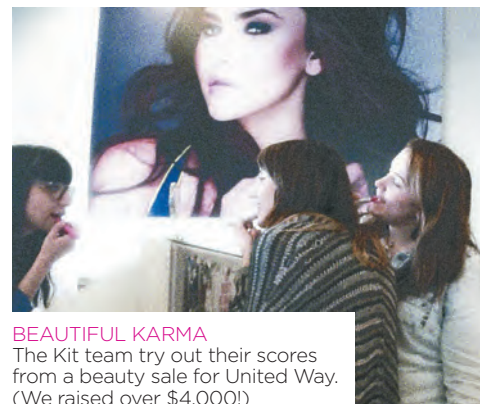

CLOCKWISE: Jane Larkworthy walks her dog; some of Jane's fave things including a Zero + Maria Cornejo jacket, a pink Viktor & Rolf clutch and an Yves Saint Laurent skirt; an Hermès bracelet and assorted nail polish; her coffee table during The Coveteur photo shoot.
