MONTH'S BEST

Clear winner

If you plan to spend most of your summer poolside (or, better yet, dockside), allow us to introduce you to the Hunter Mini Tote Bag. The shrunken size holds the necessities (what more do you need than a book, your sunnies and a sarong?) without overloading you. And there's a handy opaque pouch inside for anything not fit for public viewing. With the rubber base paying homage to the brand's iconic boots, PVC exterior and removable leather strap, a few playful splashes or even the odd summer shower won't dampen your spirits—or the bag's contents. —*Vanessa Taylor. TALKING POINT

SERENA WILLIAMS

SOCIAL BACKHANDS

One good thing to come out of the New York Times's body-shaming piece on Serena Williams: Women like J.K. Rowling spoke up by taking to Twitter and lashing out at the newspaper's ignorance. Around the same time, Hunger Games star Amandla Stenberg hopped on Instagram to criticize Kylie Jenner's cornrows, citing cultural appropriation and elaborating on the damage it causes, which raised important questions in the process. So is it disappointing that it takes a celebrity to draw our attention to body, race and cultural issues? Absolutely. But considering social media may be the only avenue some people have to educate themselves, it's important for those with a voice to speak up and deliver truths, no matter how harsh they may be. Besides, if you can't stand the heat? Stay out of problematic territory. —Anne T. Donahue

CANDACE BUSHNELL

When did your interest in fashion start?
“I grew up in the '60s, and my mother was very fashionable and would make our clothes. It seems so crazy now, but it was what all the mothers did. My mother was a tap dancer and my grandmother would sew her all of these elaborate costumes that we would play

BOOKS

STILL KILLING IT

Candace Bushnell, who created a cultural phenomenon with Sex and the City, adds to her bibliography (and our summer reading lists) with Killing Monica. We chatted about the impact of style—on characters and real life with when we were kids. We had the costume box with top hats and belly-dancing costumes and weird gold hats, all kinds of things.”

BY ALEX LAWS

How important are clothes to your characters?
“When I’m writing a book, I’m always thinking about what the characters are wearing. They’re like costumes to me. When Sondra-Beth puts on her Monica outfit, I thought of it as kind of Lady Gaga-ish. I had this vision of these wings, because Monica is larger than life. There’s a part of me that can’t stop thinking, ‘What would the wardrobe be in this scene?’ I’ve always written like that. It’s like that old saying, ‘The clothes make the man.’”

How important are clothes to you personally?
“When I first moved to New York, there was this shoe thing. When you walked into a restaurant, the maitre d’ looked at your shoes, and if you were wearing good shoes you’d get a good table, and if you were not wearing good shoes, they wouldn’t have any tables. I had literally one or two pairs of shoes and they were maybe a size too big—you know, I got them on like 80 per cent sale—but I was like, ‘I don’t care! I need good shoes!’”

It’s hard to imagine a world without Sex and the City. Do you walk around thinking, “I did that?”
“I think one’s always trying to do better. It’s my life. Let’s face it. I’m like a one-sided person. I’m really into writing and being creative. I ride horses too—I do dressage. It’s so freaking hard; I don’t know why I do it. There’s all the equipment and cleaning the tack, and everyone’s like, ‘Why don’t you just relax?’ and I’m like, ‘No, I’m going to a horse show!’ I’m always like, ‘I’ll relax when I’m dead.’”

Sandra Bullock
The actor autographed 10 pairs of Rupert Sanderson Minion heels, which raised $42,425 for charity. Bullock then matched the total.

Sam Smith
The British singer is the face of Balenciaga's Fall 2015 menswear campaign, marking his first collab with a fashion house.

Kaia Gerber
Cindy Crawford's 13-year-old daughter made her modelling debut in Vogue Italia and scored a role in an indie film.

Drake
The rapper's preppy, all-white Wimbledon ensemble with a sweater draped over his shoulders was ridiculed on Twitter.

COOL COLLAB

Couture colour

Italian designer Giambattista Valli sat down with us at his studio in Paris to talk haute couture. It girls and why a passionate lover is the best makeup

BY RANI SHEEN

Couture week in Paris is the stuff of fashion dreams: spectacular handcrafted clothes, opulent venues and exquisitely dressed stylists, clients, actresses and It girls at every turn. At Giambattista Valli's show at the Grand Palais, models in enormous fluffy gowns covered the runway like extremely expensive marshmallows. Later, at his studio, where those pieces were hanging for closer inspection, we chatted about his other big launch of the week: the five carefully chosen lipsticks he designed for M.A.C Cosmetics. "These are my fetish colours, my obsession colours that in the last 10 years you always find in my collections," he says. "I thought this was the perfect pink—perfection doesn't exist, but it was the one that represented me the best—the best coral, fuchsia, red and dark red."

Despite the girliness of this colour family, in Valli's mind the shades are bold and modern. "I think the pale pink can be absolutely graphic with something totally black," he says. "Fuchsia can be fabulous when you have on a white shirt and a pair of jeans, and you've just come out of the shower, and you have wet hair and the fuchsia lip." The bullets are matte, but there's also a pearly gloss to be slicked on overtop or worn alone—like the high-shine pink lip that makeup artist Val Garland was applying backstage at Valli's show the day before. "I like that it catches the light," says Valli. "It gives glamour, something a bit more special—you don't go to the office with gloss on."

Even so, cosmetics aren't the ultimate accessory for a big night out. "To have the most passionate lover on your arm—that's the best makeup you can have," Valli says. "Your face really changes when you have somebody totally madly in love with you."

VALLI GIRLS

Giambattista Valli is known for his close relationships with his clients—a wide variety of North American celebrities and European It girls, sometimes called "Valli Girls," united by their taste for drama but also a kind of casual elegance. "It's my biggest inspiration to know them, to learn from them, to get inspired by them," says the designer. "Most of the time, I love it when I get surprised by the way they interpret the clothes, turning my dress into her dress. This is extremely important." On that note, we asked him for his first impression of five of his most memorable clotheshorses.

"The most extraordinary, unexpected, one of a kind. It's when beauty goes beyond, when somebody can be so unique and a leader of something different."

"The best entrance I've ever seen in my life. She was running around in this dress like the happiest little girl ever, and wearing it almost like it was a T-shirt. Her makeup and hair looked like she'd just come out of the shower."

"She was amazing with her interpretation of this, because I styled it in a totally different way in the collection. She looked smashing, divine, she looked like her. I love shorts for evening—it's like a modern tuxedo."

"This is the Met ball; we went together. Allison, she's divine. She's like pure beauty in every sense."

"Amy was one of the best dates of my life. So beautiful, I was shocked. She says, 'I'm here for you, do whatever you want with me in terms of creating a look. I'm an actress, what's your dream, you tell me.'"

INTERVIEW

CURVE APPEAL

Style blogger Gabi Gregg has a captivatingly fresh approach to fashion—the rules are there ain't no rules

BY NATASHA BRUNO

Gabi Gregg is on a mission to reshape the fashion industry. She channels her passion for style, writing and body positivity into a buzzed-about blog, GabiFresh. Since starting her blog back in 2008, Gregg has gained recognition as an advocate for plus-sized fashion: She's launched three swimsuit collections and been featured in multiple magazines (Glamour, Teen Vogue, InStyle, the New York Times and Seventeen), and Dove has picked her to be the spokesperson for its Choose Beautiful campaign. We sat down with the L.A.-based blogger at the Women in the World Summit in New York City, and she dished about the plus-sized market, breaking fashion rules and the age-old struggle to find the right bathing suit.

What made you enter the blogosphere?

"I started my blog because there were no options for younger plus-sized women. Nothing! There was no Forever 21+. There was no ASOS Curve. So it was really a resource for telling girls, 'This is where I shop.' And you had to be creative."

Has there been a defining moment in your career?

"I blogged about myself in a bikini a few years ago and it had a huge response. Women were so amazed and inspired to see someone my size wearing a bikini because it's not something you see every day, especially in a positive light. We're shamed into thinking you have to have a specific body type—the 'beach body.' It went viral, and because of that, a swimsuit company called Swimsuitsforall reached out to me and said, 'We love your message; would you be interested in doing a capsule collection with us?' The first collection I had went crazy—the website literally crashed when it launched. Girls were on the website at midnight waiting for it to come out. It sold out in two days."

What's your style strategy?

"I reject all the fashion rules. I am so sick of talking about them. So many magazines will call and say, 'I'd love to do a story on plus size. Tell us why this works for your body type.' I never think about that when I am getting dressed. I might try something on and think it doesn't look good on me, but I'm not like 'I can't wear that because it's not the right shape.' I love sack dresses, but everyone tells us that you have to cinch the waist and show off your hourglass. There is nothing wrong with women who want to do that, but I don't want to feel like I have to, and I'm sick of magazines telling us we do. That message is saying, 'Here is what you need to do to disguise your body and change the shape of it.' It's damaging. It's not making us feel good about ourselves."

What's your advice to other women who have a hard time shopping?

"I am all about uplifting women and saying, 'You can wear whatever you want.' If something doesn't look good on, take it off. Don't buy it. But try different things—don't limit yourself and say, 'I'm not going to wear stripes.' That's crazy! I have so many stripes. Know that you don't have to stick to a certain rule."

You're a pro when it comes to swimwear. What tips do you have for finding a suit that fits right?

"The number one is fit and support; other than that, you can go in any direction. Move around when you try it on. I have big boobs, so I have to make sure nothing is falling out. I love a great underwire bikini because I want to feel supported."

SALON-STYLE HAIR

[no appointment necessary]

Add a boost of summer's best trends to your look while you treat yourself to salon-quality hair at home

Summer is the time to let your hair down and experiment—with colour, texture and more. This season let Shoppers Drug Mart be your go-to destination for top-level hair care.

1. Now Trending

Bouncy curls and beach waves were spotted all over the red carpet—just look at Allison Williams and Cara Delevingne's recent appearances for inspiration. Skip the salon and achieve a gorgeously tousled beach-sexy look at home, thanks to GOSH Beach Look Saltwater Spray which can be used on damp or dry hair.

2. Tried, Textured & True

Braids are everywhere this season, from the runway to every music festival and even the work place. Whether you're rocking a classic braid or trendy fishtail, it's important to start with a good base. Fekkai PrX Reparatives Shampoo is infused with Argan to help detangle and resist future damage.

3. A 70s Love Story

The middle part is here to stay. A nod to the 1970s, this look, seen on the runway at Valentino and Céline, and on the red carpet thanks to Reese Witherspoon and Keira Knightley, projects a classic, stylish ease. Add göt2b® mind-blowing Mousse to your arsenal for a touchably sleek middle-parted pony.

4. Brighten Up

Whether you're all about on-trend pastel shades (oh hi, Kelly Osbourne!), the new jewel tone dyes (we love your purple, Nicole Richie!) or just want to keep your usual colour in check, the L'Oréal Paris® EverPure Color Care System™ 8in1 Color Miracle™ Spray is for you. Boasting eight beauty benefits, this wonder treatment protects color from fading, evens out hair's texture, helps shield against heat damage and more.

5. Summer's Smoothest Style

Give your hair the sleek and smooth treatment, as seen on the recent runways at Ralph Lauren, Oscar de la Renta and more. Nexxus® Humectress® Encapsulate™ Serum progressively smoothes the hair fiber surface to bring it back to its pre-damaged state.

6. The Backstage Treatment

Blondes are having a moment! With model babes like Gigi Hadid and Karlie Kloss representing the light side of things, perhaps now is the time to take the plunge into blonde? With Garnier Olia ammonia-free haircolour, expect shiny, soft and silky blonde.

BODY CARE

Feet first

Sandal season isn't as fun if your feet aren't ready for their close-up. Put your best foot forward with a little help from an expert

BY RANI SHEEN

Tom Bachik attends to Heidi Klum's nails.

"Pedicures aren't just about good looks," says L.A.-based nail pro Tom Bachik, who admittedly makes the fingers and toes of his regular clients Jennifer Lopez and Heidi Klum look very, very good. Shocked to hear a recent statistic that four in 10 Canadian women have never had a pedicure, and 44 per cent have not had one in at least a year, Bachik goes on to make a strong case that gorgeous feet free of dry, cracked skin, calluses and corns improve our quality of life—especially during sandal season. Here, his instructions for keeping your toes gladiator-ready all summer long.

Make the shoe fit The switch-over from boots to strappy heels signals the start of callus season. "Calluses are formed because your body is sensing extra pressure in those areas and is trying to protect them," says Bachik. "So it builds that skin as a cushion to protect those areas. With a lot of my celebrity clients, the stylists use insoles and little pads in the shoes so the shoes are personalized to fit."

File dry As on our faces, exfoliation is key to baby-smooth skin (feet dry out fast because they have fewer oil glands). "As we mature, we produce even less moisture, so it's easy to get dry, cracked heels. Use a coarse foot file on dry feet. Then use a stone in warm water to get really smooth." Wanting flawless feet yesterday can lead to drastic measures like removing calluses with a razor, but patience is a virtue. "Removing them can lead to infection; it can be very sensitizing, and also your body is going to sense the trauma and build it back even thicker," says Bachik. Keep an exfoliating stone in the bath or shower—he likes Dr. Scholl's Beauty Stone—and rub calluses on the regular. "They will slowly reduce and pretty soon be gone."

Match your fingers to your toes Most of us go for contrasting polish colours on hands and feet, says Bachik, who has been seeing the re-emergence of matchy-matchy hands and toes. "I am also taking that look and spinning it a little bit and saying you can do blue hands and toes but slightly different tones." Try pastel blue fingers with cerulean toes, or bronze on feet with caramel fingernails.

BRIGHT IDEA

Flashes of neon and saturated pastel makeup brightened up the spring runways. A hit of colour on a clean face is a fresh way to make a splash, and while some sunny days call for nothing but sunscreen, others require hot-as-the-sun lip colour or neon eyeliner that won't melt into your mojito. New-York-based makeup artist Troy Surratt, whose line has just launched at Sephora in Canada, gives us summer strategies for a look that's vibrant and playful—not smeary clown face.

Be strategic with brights

If bright runway looks are too much for you, tone them down—a bright orange eye can become a pretty peach—or apply strategically. “If you are going to try a bold colour, it’s fun to explore liners. Don’t cover the entire eyelid, but do something that is bold and graphic on the lash line.”

2. NARS LARGER THAN LIFE LONG-WEAR EYELINER IN BARROW STREET, $31, NARSCOSMETICS.COM

Try long-wear cream shadows

Cream shadows give you time to play with a bright colour before it sets. “You can blend on the eyelid with a finger or brush; then the moisture evaporates and leaves behind a shadow look that doesn’t move.”

3. MAKE UP FOR EVER AQUAMATIC WATERPROOF GLIDE-ON EYE SHADOW IN I-30 IRIDESCENT LIME GREEN, $26, SEPHORA.CA

4. YVES ROCHER ULTRA LONG-LASTING WATERPROOF CREAM EYESHADOW IN AQUA BLUE, $20, YVESROCHER.CA

Illuminate with moisture

Get your glow on with dewy moisture products, instead of shimmering powders. “When the makeup is done I mist the skin, and it takes away any sort of makeup-y, powdery quality, and makes skin look glowy, moist and beautiful.”

5. THE BODY SHOP VITAMIN E AQUA BOOST SORBET, $20, THEBODYSHOP.CA

6. L'OCCITANE PEONY PERFECTING MIST, $25, CA.LOCCITANE.COM

Keep lips sheer

A matte, opaque lip can be overdone and drying in the summer. “Go for lighter-weight tinted balms and sheer, glossy lipstick formulas,” says Surratt.

7. SURRATT BEAUTY LIPS LIQUE IN POM PON, $37, SEPHORA.CA

8. PAUL & JOE BEAUTE LIP GLOSS M IN STRAWBERRY KIWI, $28, SHOPPERS DRUG MART

Lighten the layers

Skip primer and layers of foundation, which can feel too heavy and just melt off in the heat. “Lighten up with sheer textures. I’m loving the milky lightweight foundations in dropper form, and I still love tinted moisturizers and BBs with built-in SPF.”

9. DIOR DIORSKIN NUDE BB CRÈME, $48, DIOR COUNTERS

10. BOBBI BROWN INTENSIVE SKIN SERUM FOUNDATION SPF 40, $72, BOBBIBROWNCOSMETICS.CA

Blot your base

Take the oil out of your base before you leave the house instead of waiting for the grease slick to arrive later. “After you apply tinted moisturizer with SPF, blot the forehead, nose, cheeks and chin with blotting papers to absorb excess oil or humectants.”

POOL RULES

Blonds may have more fun, but come summer they have to deal with the perils of pool water. But they're not the only ones who should be hatching a protection plan. "Everybody knows what chlorine does to your hair—not only to the colour but also the feeling of the hair overall," says celebrity hairstylist and Herbal Essences spokesperson Charles Baker Strahan, who works with Mariah Carey and Amy Poehler. That dried-out, straw-like effect is decidedly uncool, so here's how to keep hair in top condition throughout pool-party season.

1. Get wet before diving in
Think of your hair like a sponge. "If you were going to mop up some spilled red wine, you would want to wet the sponge, because if you don't, it stains. But if you fill it with water first, you can wring out the staining elements and it will completely release. The same is true of your hair."

2. Wash that chlorine right out of your hair

Use a detoxifying shampoo after you get out of the pool to remove the chlorine. "This is also a wonderful thing to use if you're the girl who went to a wedding and got the hairdresser who used the entire can of hairspray."

3. Apply shampoo to dry hair

If you don't manage to shower right after your dip, massage shampoo into dry hair before you get it wet. "This will help to remove a little bit more of the chlorine and product from the hair."

4. Fortify with protein

Everybody loves seeing what the sea air or the salt water can do to her hair, but give it a boost. "Enhance that with a protein-fortifying shampoo that helps mend damaged areas, and then follow up with a beautiful conditioner to make sure you have a great hydration balance."

Water babies

Glistening, raked-back hair slunk down so many spring runways, it seemed as if the world's top models were taking poolside detours between shows. For this cool, edgy look, apply a generous amount of gel or serum to damp roots and rake it back with your fingers, stopping just past the ears. Once hair is dry, apply a little hair oil for shine, from roots to ends.

NEON WAVE

Choppy, uneven swipes of polish adorned naked nails on the spring runways, in all the colours of a once-vibrant fluorescent wetsuit left out to dry in the sun. This easy-to-DIY nail art is so laid-back, it's practically horizontal. "It's all about that hippie girl who's a surfer, who loves colour, who is playing with her nail polish at the beach," said manicurist Miss Pop at Jeremy Scott, where she used OPI neons. "No two models have the same look, and if they do, come get me because somebody messed up."

Get Miss Pop's look
1. Start with a ridge-filling base coat, so the nail looks polished.
2. Choose a few neon polishes.
3. Wipe most of the polish off the brush.
4. Paint on squiggles, waves or smudges, leaving lots of negative space and a few blank.
5. Finish with a matte topcoat for a faded effect and so the designs really show. Now you're ready to hit the beach.
